Sikkim has strongly developed all the three pillars of sustainable development in Sikkim.

Firstly, socio-cultural development aspiration such as cultural conservation; preservation of holy and sacred sites; awareness and higher education; local languages and traditional knowledge system; technical and vocational capacities; peace and harmony; good governance and equity being followed in Sikkim. Secondly, economic development by promoting cleaner energy like hydro power; following organic farming for

Finally, the state has successfully involved all sections of the society namely, eminent personalities and experts, academic, community institutions, social and religious institutions, women groups; youth and people at large, Sikkim has pioneered for sustainable development which is holistic and need of the time.

Sikkim has achieved many milestones in all round development of the State. As regards to the development of capacity building of youths the process was started in way back in 2003 by starting separated section for the Capacity Building of Youths. The concept of establishing the livelihood school in the State with a full fledge Capacity Building Institute was a big milestone in the development to capacity of youth.
